

29TH OF MARCH 2024

TOGETHER EMPOWERING ALL WOMEN

AGAINST ABUSES AND HUMAN TRAFFICKING

About the project

Annually, in March, TEAW (Together Empowering all Women) gathers more than 100 law students from all over the world in a volunteer awareness action. Usually, in each partner University/NGO, there is a group of students raising awareness on specific women's rights for the celebration of the International Women's Day and awareness on THB for the Freedom Day (14th of March). During the 3rd week of March, the participants meet in an online conference, presenting the activities that they have implemented. In the meantime, they cooperate online to exchange ideas and good practices. It is a international cooperation, with multicultural aspects, that has been highly appreciated by the students involved.

Our Student Speakers shared their insights on topic like “The rise of women is not about the fall of men” and setting the tone with their perspectives. - SRM University Delhi-NCR, Sonapat Faculty of Law

How can we fight against human trafficking ?

01/ Raise Awareness
Educate communities about the signs of human trafficking and its various forms. This empowers individuals to identify potential victims and report suspicious activities.

02/ Support NGOs and Law Enforcement
Contribute to or volunteer with organizations dedicated to combating human trafficking. Additionally, advocate for policies that strengthen law enforcement efforts and provide resources to address the root causes of trafficking.

03/ Promote International Cooperation
Human trafficking often transcends borders. Encourage international collaboration among governments, NGOs, and law enforcement agencies to share information, coordinate efforts, and enforce stricter measures against traffickers.

04/ Empower Vulnerable Populations
Address the root causes of vulnerability, such as poverty and lack of education. Empower at-risk communities by providing economic opportunities, education, and social support to reduce the factors that make individuals susceptible to trafficking.

"Knowledge Steez in collaboration with Vedseadus Legal conducted an Open Mic on the Eve of International Women's Day on March 8th. The event is being held virtually via the Webex platform. The event was open to all and invited Ekta Singh, Adv Srishthi Agarwal, and Aditya as Guest speakers. The event session deals with all the issues and progress of women in Indian perspective and has also discussed on 2024 of United Nations theme for women's day i.e.

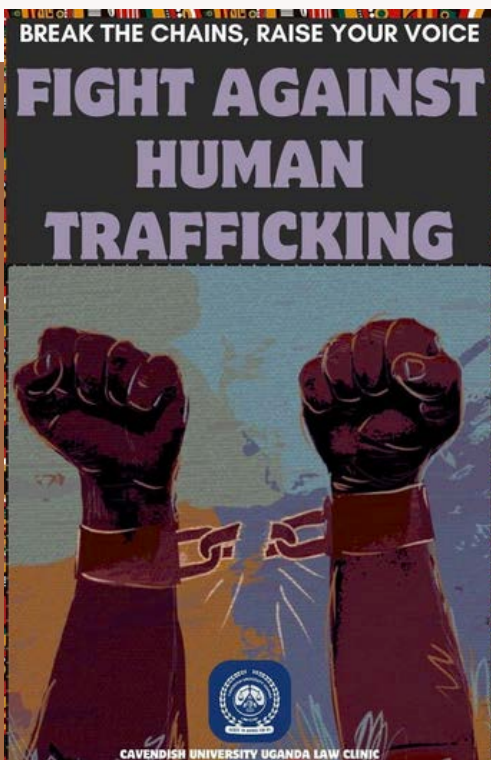

"Invest in Women: Accelerate Progress"- Knowledge Steez, India

"This event was a successful manifesto of the theme Together empowering all women having 30 members in the session where they put in their thoughts and discussed on the status of Women in their perspective. It was a successful event and the discussion had all insights of progress that women made in the past years and what more can be done for improving the status of women in the society. "-Knowledge Steez, India

Moreover, we also had a group discussion on the topic Cyber Violence against women. Also our students from NLU Sonipat conducted a poster making competition to raise awareness, also some of our students from Ambedkar Law University Tamilnadu also conducted a Breaking stereotype campaign.

In a proactive move towards fostering awareness and action against human trafficking and gender-based violence (GBV), Cavendish University Uganda's Law Clinic spearheaded a campaign, leveraging various platforms to advocate for justice and societal change, through a series of initiatives ranging from panel discussions to street law campaigns, and shooting a campaign video the university community united in solidarity to combat these pervasive issues. The university led a comprehensive campaign against human trafficking and gender-based violence (GBV). They utilized posters, panel discussions, movie nights, and street law campaigns to raise awareness and spark action.

These efforts aimed to educate and empower the community and the public to prevent these injustices. Through dialogue, education, and grassroots engagement, the campaign fostered a collective commitment to advocating for justice and promoting human rights.

Cavendish University Uganda's Law Clinic learned the importance of approaches in addressing complex social issues like human trafficking and GBV. They found that raising awareness through various ways was key to engaging diverse audiences and fostering a sense of collective responsibility.

“Overall, the campaign underscored the significance of education, advocacy, and active participation in combating human rights violations and promoting a culture of justice and equality.”

“In our effort to listen to the stories of women who often go unnoticed, we talked with them about their lives. We asked about their education, families, kids, and what they dream about. Through TEAW 2024, we made space for them to share openly. We learned about the challenges they face every day, like balancing family and work.

By hearing their stories, we wanted to understand their dreams and celebrate their strength. We hope that by sharing their experiences, we can shine a light on their importance in our community.”-

The voices of women equally matter and that they are equal citizens and should be treated as such. Speaking up against discrimination is never a loss. We should claim our space and make our presence known. Womanhood, life and independence!

TECHNICAL UNIVERSITY OF MOLDOVA

“To acknowledge the impact and importance of such topic as women’s rights, we organized on the 18th of March an event at the Technical University of Moldova, in front of 90 students. We presented inspiring and famous women from the STEM industry and the history of our country, as well as the organizations that women take part on a daily basis to shape a better community for everyone. Moreover, we organized a session of discussions with students about the role of women in creating our world and held a quiz about some general knowledge about women in our society.”

“This event served as a valuable experience in several aspects. It underscored the significance of raising awareness about women's rights. By providing an opportunity to discuss these themes, we were able to promote gender equality and social justice. The event highlighted the importance of showcasing diverse role models, particularly women in STEM fields, and not only, to inspire the next generation of innovators. The interactive aspect of the session, including discussions and the quiz, encouraged a deeper understanding of the roles women play in shaping our society.”

For the successful running of the TEAW project in Romania, the students of the Center for Human Rights and Migration from the Romanian-American University have organized activities to promote the rights of women and to raise awareness on the main risks of human trafficking. In the first week of March, RAU students organised group discussions, online campaigns and on-spot meetings with about 1000 high school students, professors, and parents.

Since the 1st of March, the month dedicated to women, the Center opened an event on the Facebook page, where were posted messages on women's rights and cyber violence, a phenomenon increasingly present in everyday life, wanting to reveal the virulence of this form of violence, its effects and target audience.

On the 8th of March, ECLER hosted the Ukrainian Women's Forum, gathering more than 200 Ukrainian refugees and raising awareness on their safety.

To celebrate Freedom Day, ECLER and RAU organised two large events for awareness on human trafficking that were supported by the Embassy of Canada and the Embassy of the Netherlands.

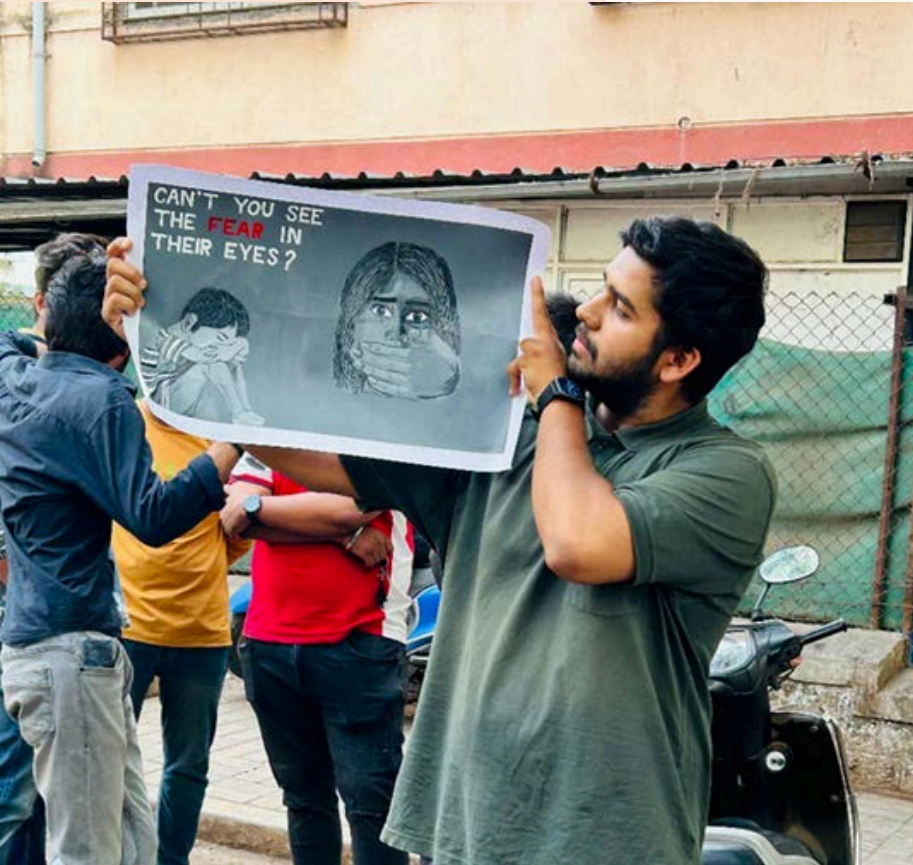

Also, ECLER and RAU organized a video competition and a drawings competition on prevention of human trafficking with a very large participation.
